What I believe makes London Met stand out from every other university is the beautifully diverse student body. Since starting in September I have had the pleasure to become friends with such a variety of people. I am so thankful for you all broadening my horizons. Learning so much in such a short space of time proves that our best asset is our people. I know it sounds horribly cliché, but it's true that the students really do make London Met what it is - a diverse community that I am proud to be a part of!

I seriously believe the students to be the most valuable asset that LMU has. We have students of every age, ethnicity, sexuality and class, and it's amazing to see how harmoniously we work together. All of these things (and more) contribute to who you are and what you think. It's fantastic that we are all so different and so I believe it should be positively recognised. Name me ONE university as vibrant as ours?

To create the most enriched university experience for all, I need to hear what you want so I can make it happen. I want to help students reach their full potential in regards to their involvement, and to know that I can be part of this is really exciting. Holding my own workshop at the recent Get Ahead conference it was fantastic to see so many of you enriching one another's learning. If you tell me what you want I will make your goals my own, as you are my only priority.

If I'm elected onto the Student Council I want to hear what you ALL have to say. If you want this to happen I am the right candidate to represent you because I will make it my mission to ensure you are heard. I will not stop there. I want answers to your questions, and to see action being taken. Please know that I will do all of this and more.

A quick hello...
